A close-up, low-angle shot of an office chair's lumbar support mechanism. The chair is dark-colored, possibly black or dark blue, and features a mesh backrest. The lumbar support is a prominent, curved, dark-colored plastic or metal structure that fits into the lower back of the chair. It has several adjustment points, including a large, circular dial and a smaller, rectangular dial. The chair is positioned against a light blue background. The lighting is soft and directional, highlighting the contours of the chair's frame and the texture of the mesh.
